New York, NY (April 1, 2015) – Eleven Reflections on September is a Spoken Word and multimedia performance on Arab American experience, Wars on/of Terror, and the "constant, quiet rain of death amidst beauty" that each autumn brings in a post-9/11 world. Based on a poetry series Andrea Assaf (Writer, Director & Performer) has been writing since 2001, its journey spans the fall of the Twin Towers, the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan, and the revolutions and conflicts now sweeping through the Middle East. Aesthetically, it explores the disintegration of language in the face of violence, and the possibility of reconstructing hope. The witnessing of autumn becomes a metaphor for the fallen – soldiers and civilians.

Eleven Reflections on September is created and performed by a powerful and diverse collective of women artists with global roots -- including Iran, Turkey, India, Lebanon, the U.S. and more. In addition to the performance at the La MaMa First Floor Theatre, the citywide project includes an interactive installation at the Hi-ARTS Gallery in East Harlem, by Alice Mizrahi, that asks New Yorkers "What changed?" after 9/11. Associated events include community dialogues, a DJ party, and a showcase at the Apollo Theater Soundstage as part of the Women of the World Festival.

"Sometimes as a poet you're simply compelled to write," says Andrea Assaf, Founder and Artistic Director of Art2Action. "In September 2001, I lived in Manhattan. In addition to mourning with the city, my experience of identity as an Arab American dramatically shifted, overnight. Through collaboration with these extraordinary artists, the project has evolved into an embodied manifesto on the devastation and empowerment of women in the face of war. We offer this not only as a reflection, but also as an invitation. Art helps us have a dialogue based in shared experience, so that we can arrive at new understandings together."

The New York City premiere of Eleven Reflections on September, written and directed by Andrea Assaf, featuring transnational dance artist Donna Mejia and vocalist/Daf player Aida Shahghasemi, runs from Thursday, April 30 through Sunday, May 17 at The First Floor Theatre of La MaMa. Eleven Reflections on September is an Art2Action production, originally commissioned by the Pangea World Theater, and made possible by the generous support of the Princess Grace Foundation-USA.
